I pass him the trash can, which luckily has a plastic bag in it. And he barfs and expels at the same time, and I feel bad for the kid. Do you think we need a doctor? He shakes his head. No, this has happened before, I'll be okay, and he throws up again. I think we've been had, I say, trying to make light of the situation.

A.M. Homes is acclaimed for her unnerving looks at suburban life in such searing works as The Safety of Objects, Jack, and Music for Torching. May We Be Forgiven stars Harold Silver, a historian who's always been jealous of his successful brother, George. May We Be Forgiven has been accused of sentimentality, and there's no doubt that, as in her previous novel, This Book Will Save Your Life, she's interested in the ways human contact can mend her fractured male protagonists, an interest that sits uneasily beside her satire.

A razor-sharp critique of American family life from one of the country's foremost comic writers, May We Be Forgiven scooped the Women's Prize for Fiction, and deservedly so. A glorious satirical opus of one man's struggle through the vicissitudes of life, it is arguable Homes' finest book to date.
