Connecting Technology and Music The Virtual Orchestra

How a Simple Idea Led to a National Movement. The idea for the program began back in the 1980s in Columbia, South Carolina where there were virtually no string or orchestra programs in the public schools. The University of South Carolina began a string project to train music students to teach, and recruited local elementary students for classes.

What to Expect From a Recruiter Call The Muse

While that all probably makes sense, especially if you know you d be great at a particular gig, that decision is not going to happen in a first call with a recruiter. Which is actually good news for you. The truth is that whoever is reaching out to you for the first time doesn t wield all the power to make a hiring decision right away.
